

An industrious, professional pragmatic deliverer - Now Looking for a New Career Opportunity. David is a popular senior police leader widely respected nationally within UK law enforcement, military and intelligence communities, with a comprehensive record of successful service delivery at an operational and strategic level.

Achieving the rank of Detective Chief Superintendent, his particular leadership expertise is in the fields of Intelligence, business change and risk and security management particularly the identification and assessment of threat and implementation of intervention/disruption methodologies. Responsible for more than 400 staff and an annual budget of over £25 million, Dave helped to build and then led a large business area which works with other agencies in advising, coordinating and directing law enforcement activities to protect communities in the North East of England from its most serious threats.

His responsibilities included the protection of regional infrastructure, co-ordinating policing at ports units, advising and supporting the activities of regional chief constables, establishing and developing partnership relations with other agencies, and leading upon critical operational activities. David has an established record of leading successful change management projects. These include being the appointed national user lead in a Home Office sponsored national IT programme across 45 police forces, the creation of new business areas, and the merger of large departments.

Working upon regional and national responsibilities, he is a proven and effective ambassador for his organisation and profession and negotiator with good interpersonal and influencing skills, who maintains a network of contacts across law enforcement, intelligence and military agencies. He is media trained and has appeared on local, regional and national broadcasts.
